BROADWAY THEATER. "The Gamblers."

Bridge whist and the passion for 1 orms the theme of "The Gambiers," iich comes to the Broadway theater eath of a talented aristocrat from eart trouble who had become a com-arative outcast on account of his arative outcast on account of his rocivities for gambling. Before his eath he sends for his sister and brothto visit him. Upon their arrival ne from them a promise to care for the girl who has seen nothing of life. The girl is fascinating and alluring and without more than a reasonable amount of the art of womankind finds hertelf admired by the attractive young men of the set she moves in.

The third set awards a bridge whist The third act reveals a bridge whist game where cards are marked by an adventuress to ruin and disgrace the young orphan. The scene is splendidly conceived and skilfully handled, easily ranking with many of the best acts in modern doams. And this stage setting is, a magnificent one. The human situations in this act are splendid and the code of the scheming duchess delightful.

Eva Vincent, an artist of ripened art, plays the duchess and shares honors with Mabel Cameron. Her voice is peculiarly well adapted to the part and she plays it with a charm that is also gether satisfying.

Mabel Cameron plays the orphan, and a more captivating little woman it would be indeed difficult to locate. Her elecution is almost perfect, her enunciation distinct and she plays with a fine discrimination and skill. Her work in the third act, where the marking cards are produced, is most impressive, her repressed emotionalism and ber flery sweep of intensity at the end of the scene making great effect.

Austin Webb is splendid as Lord Royle, the adventurer, and Ina Hammer makes a remarkably effective and ner makes a remarkably effective and convincing adventuress. Walter Constantine as Father Gilbert plays a priest with nice discrimination and a makeup that is indeed natural. The Mme Jason of Matilde Deshon is a nice

MUCH BUILDING Planned in City of New Haven This Year.

According to the opinions of leading architects, and-contractors, 1999 promises to be a banner year in the development of real estate in New Haven, unless something unforeseen should occur to check plans actually in the works. The very steady growth in construc-tion in New Haven, during 1908, as shown by the annual report of Bulld-ing Inspector Austin, will continue, it is believed, in so far as the erection of new residences and tenement houses are concerned and there are also now being planned a number of very large contracts in the business center of the

Among these may be mentioned the alterations to be made to the New Haven Steam Heating company's old Haven Steam Heating company's old plant, purchased not long ago by John McPartland. It is intended to rip out the old building and fit it up with a number of small stores. The original plan to turn it into a public market has been abandoned. Then changes to be wade to the Goodwar property of the beauty of the Goodwar property of the product of the Goodwar property are to be made to the Goodyear prop-erty in Coongress avenue.
